MEDICINE BEYOND MEDICATION

NARRATIVE HEALTHCARE SYMPOSIUM

DESCRIPTION

In this statewide narrative healthcare symposium, discover how creative and reflective writing can supplement clinical practice and care. Hear stories from surgeons, general practitioners, nurses, social workers, and chaplains on how narrative practice in healthcare has provided additional support, both for themselves and their patients, clients, and practitioners. Write with practitioners within your discipline, applying data-evidence based methods: Reflective Writing, Expressive Writing, and Poetic Medicine. Share your own stories in a supportive environment very different from any you have encountered, where listening, appreciation, and encouragement balance out the pressures and quandaries of today's medical field.

Featured honored guest, Rita Charon, MD, PhD, founder of the Narrative Medicine Program at Columbia University, chair of the Department of Medical Humanities and Ethics at Columbia University, and 2019 Jefferson Scholar of the Humanities, will speak on October 18 at 7:00 p.m. at MAHEC in Asheville, followed by a question and answer session. Her talk will provide WNC practitioners guidance into the field of Narrative Medicine, in which third-year medical students, and others, develop narrative competency and narrative humility through the practice of close reading and reflective writing. Dr. Charon will explore how this practice prepares practitioners with listening skills that support exceptional care. These skills also serve the world beyond the clinic by building the ability to see the whole story of a person's health, including social determinants.
